The Democratic Party.

IF THE LEADERS ARE AS FOOLISH AS THEY WERE IN 1896, DEFEAT IS CERTAIN.

The New Orleans Picayune, one of the ablest and most conservative democratic journals south of the Potomac river, in a leading editorial headed "As to the National Democratic Party," says:

"When the democratic party allied itself with the populists and other Western socialists, its leaders sought to cut themselves loose from the Eastern democracy, and they raised the cry that they did not need New York and New Jersey to carry the country.

"The overwhelming defeat suffered by the mongrel combination should have taught, and doubtless did teach, some important lessons in party politics, and unless the democratic leaders are bent on the complete and final destruction of their party, they will cease the wild and radical assaults upon the national money standard and public credit and private property, which made the staple of their doctrines in the last national canvass.

"The populists have on all sides announced their determination to make no more alliances with the democrats, and the other socialists are too few in number and too radical in their notions to secure the favor of any but cranks and radicals of the most extreme sort. The democrats of the old and conservative type who were driven from the ranks of their party by the wild plunge it made into populism are still democrats.

"The problem for the democratic leaders is to take measures to unite the party on some basis of principle where all can stand. No good can come of trying to force particular ideas about money on anybody. The money question is a business matter that must be and will be settled by the great commercial countries engaged in international traffic, and legislation cannot change what commercial usage enacts. All socialistic attacks on public and private property can only and in precipitating a bloody conflict between those who have something and those who want to seize upon it. Great political parties must be based on principles national, public and general. Socialism, while it pretends to regard only the good of the whole population, is really a struggle by self-appointed leaders to advance and aggrandize themselves at the expense of those who work and earn or have laid up something as the result of their labor and intelligence.

"Democracy's business is to preserve the republic as a republic, where all proper personal and property rights are protected by a constitution and laws. When democracy does this, it has performed a high duty.

"If there is to be a real national democratic party, its leaders must assemble all the elements and forces that will respond to the call of a real democracy. The vote of New York is just as necessary as ever it was. The foolish notion about the West is too narrow for the basis of a national party. New York this fall is going to elect a Governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of State, comptroller, treasurer, attorney-general, State engineer and surveyor, members of the Legislature and members of Congress. It is believed by those who have reason to hold such a belief that the democrats have a fair chance to win if silver is not made a feature in the campaign, and if State issues and good government are brought to the front. Governor Black's administration has not been satisfactory. The canal scandal, in which public funds to the amount of several million dollars are involved and the election law known as the "Black bill," which was a blunder, to say the least, give the democrats an opportunity to overthrow the present administration and to regain the control of the State. With clean candidates, who are also men of ability in whom the people have confidence, they may be able to defeat the republicans.

"The war with Spain and its outcome are going to exert a profound influence on the national political situation. If the democratic leaders are wise in their generation, they may reunite the party. If they are as foolish as they were in 1896, they may as well dig their political graves."

The deaths in our army seem to be on the increase, since peace has been declared. Some attribute this state of affairs to the fact that we began the war before we were prepared.

Thomas B. Richey Missing.

Mr. Thomas B. Richey, one of the most prominent merchants of this town and county has been missing since Tuesday, August 23d. The facts are as follows: Mr. Richey, his wife, and his wife's sister and brother had been in the habit of taking a two weeks trip every summer. They had planned one for this season, but on account of an accident to the President of the National Bank of Commerce, of New York, in which Mrs. Richey's brother, Mr. Duval, was cashier, he could not take his usual vacation, and instead he invited Mr. Richey and his sisters to spend two weeks with him at Manhattan Beach, near New York, where he was with them when not engaged by his duties in the bank. Mr. Richey had been in bad health for sometime, and finding that he did not improve, started to return home on Tuesday, August 23d. On Tuesday evening, he reached Washington, and stopped at the Howard House. From there he wrote home that he was delayed by his trunk not reaching him, but that he would be home on Wednesday. He also said that it was very hot and he proposed to take a ride on the trolley. When he did not reach home on Wednesday, his sisters at once became apprehensive, from the fact, that whenever he had previously failed to reach home, at the appointed time, he would notify them by telegram.

Inquiries were made at the Howard House and the only information received was that he had been there on Tuesday, had gone to his room, but that they knew nothing more as to his movements.

His trunk reached Washington on the 8.16 p. m. train, Tuesday. The check attached to his trunk was No. 34,605, and was delivered to the baggage man before 10 o'clock that night, for the same check was sent back to New York on the 10.30 train, attached to a dressing case. It is more than probable, the railroad men say, that his trunk was reached to some other point. They do not believe it was delivered to any private expressman. The detectives are of the opinion that the trunk was re-checked by Mr. Richey. They do not believe that Mr. Richey was foully dealt with in Washington.

Mrs. Richey, his wife, was notified by telegram on Saturday morning, when she, accompanied by her brother and sister immediately came from New York to Washington and at once instituted the most vigorous search through the proper authorities.

Before leaving Woodstock, Mr. Richey had expressed the intention of purchasing some goods in New York, and as he had no acquaintance with the merchants of that city, he carried with him two certified checks of $350.00 each. These he placed in bank in New York and received the money and it is known that he purchased $400 worth of goods in that city.

Mr. Richey was an attentive business man, very careful, and enjoyed a large share of the business of this place. For years he had been a prominent official member of the Methodist Church and was active in attending to these church duties. He enjoyed the confidence of the people, and his sudden disappearance has cast a deep gloom as well as great anxiety throughout the entire community. His wife and other members of his family have the heartfelt sympathy of our people.

Up to the hour of going to press, no information giving light upon the subject, has been received. His business, from the most reliable information we can get, is in excellent condition.

We have given above the full facts as we have been able to gather them, after the most careful examination. Many rumors, having no shadow of foundation, have been industriously circulated, and have been the offspring of the garrulity of some and the malice of others.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. RICHEY.

The Washington Post, August 31st. At 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening, 23d, Mr. Thomas Beall Richey, of Woodstock, Va., walked out of the Howard House, corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street, and from that moment has never been heard of. He disappeared as utterly as if some tremendous cataclysm had engulfed him. He was canceled as completely as though a convulsion of nature had buried him. Nothing more mysterious has ever occurred in Washington. A man in the prime of life, a prosperous merchant, a devoted husband, a sincere Christian, sober, of high repute and influential family connections, Thomas Beall Richey, passed from the Howard House into an occultation as absolute as death itself. That such a thing could happen in the very heart of Washington, at an hour when the whole city was awake and under circumstances of perfect public order and tranquility, is as astounding as any romance ever concocted by Gaborian or Du Boisgobey. Indeed, it beggars romance and takes rank with those appalling facts which prove to us how much stranger than all imaginable fiction is the simple truth.

There are details and collaterals which go to intensify the mystery. Mr. Richey stopped over in Washington for the purpose of floating or tracing his baggage, which had gone astray. He had set out from New York, where he had been purchasing a stock of goods, leaving his wife to pay a brief visit to her family, but on reaching the Capital found that his trunk was missing. On that account he put up at the Howard House, awaiting the result of a telegram to his brother-in-law in New York, and meanwhile, wrote to his niece in Woodstock, advising her of his detention. In the note he explained that he was waiting for his trunk, and would take the train for home as soon as it turned up. He closed his message by saying it was so warm that he could not sleep in his room, and that he intended taking a ride on the electric cars, probably into the suburbs, with a view to enjoying the fresh air while the city cooled off.

The remarkable fact in this connection is that while the letter itself was in Mr. Richey's well-known handwriting, and exhibited not the slightest sign of physical or mental perturbation, the envelope was addressed in ciphers, totally unfamiliar to every one of Mr. Richey's friends and relatives. The hotel stationery was not used. There was nothing to indicate the locality from which it was sent. But the post office brand on the outside showed that it had been taken up somewhere in Washington at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday morning. The presumption is, therefore, that Mr. Richey wrote the letter after leaving the hotel—possibly several hours afterward—and that some one in whose company he then was undertook to address and mail it. Another circumstance tending to complicate the mystery is that inquiry subsequently made at the Pennsylvania depot showed that the trunk had reached there next day, (24) that the check had been presented and the property removed. A telegram was received at the hotel after Mr. Richey's disappearance. It was from his brother-in-law in New York, saying that the trunk had been forwarded from the Courtland street ferry office, and it was opened by one of the lost man's brothers. The telegram gave the number of the check, and so it was an easy matter to ascertain that it had been taken up at the depot. It is also a logical conclusion that the person presenting the check must have got it from Mr. Richey. Could it have been the same man who addressed the letter which was stamped 2:30 a. m., August 24, and sent to Woodstock?

Altogether this strikes us as one of the most remarkable episodes in the history of Washington. Considering all the circumstances—the time, the place, the well-known character of the man, everything—it constitutes as profound and perplexing a mystery as ever figured in song or story. Mr. Richey disappeared on the night of Tuesday, the 23d—eight days ago—and up to a late hour last night not a trace of him, however faint, had been developed. His friends have visited the hospitals, the police stations, even the morgue. Not a gleam of light has been thrown upon the case. Silence and secrecy have been thrown over it an impenetrable cloak. We know only that Mr. Richey has been spirited away, and we naturally ask ourselves whether, if such a thing can happen to one, it may not, with equal facility, happen to another.

Rough Riders Desperate.

New York, Aug. 28.—The transport San Marcos, which sailed from Tampa August 20 and Key West August 22, arrived this morning with two batteries of the First United States Artillery, two companies of the Third Texas Volunteers, a hospital corps and a detachment of engineers.

Sixty of the worst cases were removed from the San Marcos in the afternoon. Nearly all the men are convalescents from the general army hospitals at Key West and Tampa. Private Stephen Easton, of Troop K, First Volunteer Cavalry, is suffering from melancholia, having lost his voice and hearing as the result of fever contracted while serving before Santiago. During the trip to this city his attempts to end his life became so frequent and determined that it was necessary to have a guard of hospital corps men watch him night and day. He enlisted in the Rough Riders just before they went to Cuba. Easton is of Mexican descent and comes from New Mexico.

When the transport Yucatan reached the pier and began to discharge the six companies of the Seventh Infantry, which had been brought from Santiago, it was learned that seven men had died on the trip and three more died last night while the ship lay in the bay waiting her turn to unload her human cargo. It is alleged that the ship left Santiago without a sufficient quantity of proper food or supplies for the sick, and that she reached here without any food but army rations, which the sick troops were unable to eat.

Private Harry Duval, of Troop A, Rough Riders, killed himself today by shooting himself in the temple at Camp Wikoff. The suicide took place in the guard house, where he was under arrest. He had been absent from camp thirteen days without leave and feared to face a court-martial. Duval enlisted from Arizona and was considered an excellent trooper.

AGUINALDO'S MEMORIAL.

Manila, Aug. 30.—Aguinaldo has issued a memorial to all foreign powers reciting the fact that the Filipinos have formed a government under the constitution adopted June 23rd, and that since then the insurgents have carried on a campaign of liberty, taking forty provinces and reduced Manila. They have 9,000 prisoners. Peace and tranquility prevail in the conquered provinces and there is no resistance to Aguinaldo's authority. Campaign says memorial was conducted in civilized manner and he asks the powers for recognition of the independence of the Philippine Republic.

Failing that, to grant Filipinos belligerent rights. The United States is not mentioned in the memorial. General Merritt and Greene sailed on the China for Hong Kong today. General Merritt will leave Hong Kong Saturday for Paris. General Greene will go direct to Washington. General Merritt would say little concerning the work of the peace commission but declared Spain would never again control the Philippines nor Philipinos either, if he could prevent it. General Otis has assumed command.

We will not annoy our readers by protracting the personal controversy with the Edinburg Sentinel, by commenting upon the puerile effort to explain the various statements made by one of its editors in reference to the paper. We are perfectly willing that the public shall judge from the evidence before them.

The court-martial that tried Dr. Duncan, of robbing the grave, of a Confederate officer is rumored sentenced him to 5 years in the penitentiary, but a dispatch has been sent from Fairfax C. H., that the rumor cannot be confirmed. Dr. Duncan was turned over to the sheriff of Fairfax county last Sunday and is confined in the Fairfax jail. The civil authorities have no doubt will do him justice.

Dispatches from army camps state that incompetence, jealousy and red tape by officials are the principal causes of the terrible state of affairs in the hospitals there.

FELLOW DEMOCRATS.

The Edinburg Sentinel in its issue of August 26th, 1898 says that "Democrat" is too obtuse to see the position of the Sentinel in refusing to discuss before he public with a party who persists in appearing under an assumed name.

Fellow Democrats—I desire you to look at the editorial in said issue and tell us who the author is, if you can. It seems to be a great crime in "Democrat" to write an article without signing his name to it, and at the same time this so called crime of "Democrat" is the cardinal virtue of the Sentinel author. The author tells you that he knows who I am but that he wants the public to know also. Now what on earth is there to prevent him from telling the public who I am? Is he afraid he has made such a record for truth and veracity that the people of this county will not believe him? Who knows who he is? Everybody knows what he is. But no one knows his name. Why does he not sign his name, is it because he has signed it too often already for his own good? He says that the people know who writes the editorials of the Sentinel. Who wrote the article entitled "More about the Judgeship" which branded over two thousand good honest voters of this county as tramps, idiots and vampires? The people are very anxious to know who wrote it. Yet he has the monumental cheek to say that everybody knows who writes his articles. Among the few things he does know, he knows that this is not true.

The author of said editorial says he knows the exact measure of my responsibility "moral, financial and physical" and is not frightened by it by any means.

He may know this as I have never tried to conceal my responsibility.

As to my "Moral" responsibility, I leave that for my friends to judge of, as it is not becoming a man to parade his own virtues before the public. And the man who by his own action is compelled to do so is an object of contempt. If the moral responsibility of the Sentinel is to be measured by its financial responsibility, May God help it.

It is true I am not a millionaire. I have never been connected with any Get Rich Quick Institutions, therefore have not had the opportunity that some have to accumulate money. And I am not so financially defined as I would have been had I ever invested in the Sentinel.

But there is one thing quite certain; should I desire to invest in a two for five newspaper I would be able to buy the same without a string of endorser to make good the little note which was given in the purchase of that paper, showing that the financial condition of the purchasers was such that they could not buy a cheap newspaper on their own responsibility. And yet this paper has the cheek to talk about financial standing.

The Sentinel seems to think unless a man has plenty of finances he lacks respectability. If this be true the Sentinel has certainly placed a barrier between itself and respectability.

They also say that the public understand and appreciate their position.

Its readers will remember that when it was charged that the paper was published by republicans, one of its editors over his own signature to disprove the charge had a list of democrats including himself published, as the purchasers, and when this same editor was published as one of the owners, he denied that he ever was an owner. Why should the people have any doubt as to their position on any subject?

The brilliant author of the article aforesaid states that the democrats of Shenandoah county know the editorial writers of that paper and they do not have to call on "Pretended Democrat" to vouch for their democracy.

Fellow Democrats—Take their paper of two weeks ago, in which one of their numerous editorial staff told the people that the Sentinel had on it two republicans, one of which however was converted to Free Silver in the Bryan Campaign, and democrats on its staff who do not subscribe to every issue of the hour of the democratic party, but are democrats in the main. You see according to their own confession they have men whose democracy cannot be vouched for, and the people of the county know this fact.

He says a complete answer to all I say about the politics of that paper, is that that paper stands where it did in the campaign of 1896, when "Democrat" stood "Check by Jowl" with it. Now, Fellow democrats, I stood by the Chicago Platform and Bryan as the nominee. Where were the editors of the Sentinel whose democracy need not be vouched for? One editor for McKinley, one for Palmer & Buckner, one supposed to be for Bryan and one not voting at all. Who could vouch for such editors or such a paper? The answer comes back, "No one but the editors themselves."

The Sentinel tells you of the bravery of the editorial staff. I never for once thought of questioning that notorious fact. And when I think of it I shudder for my poor self, and think of the great mistake McKinley made in not making their leavens known to the Spaniards, for had he done so, I am satisfied that Spain would never have tackled America, but would have trembled in abject terror at the very mention of such unsurpassed bravery as that of those terrible warriors.

Again the Sentinel tells you that I cannot convict its editorial staff by writing through the columns of such an undemocratic paper as the HEALD. Why is the HEALD undemocratic? Because of its views on the financial question. Has the Sentinel anyone on its staff who entertains the same views as the editor of the HEALD? If so, is it not an undemocratic for the Sentinel to associate politically with such as it is for me to associate with the HEALD? I only refer to this to show the inconsistencies of the Sentinel, and that the gentlemen who are writing for it have not brains enough to keep from convicting themselves.

O ye political lepers, I have not time to fool with you longer. We leave you to your own sad fate and warn you that the condemnation of a long suffering people is but a righteous one.

Now do not make yourselves more ridiculous than you have already done by pleading "not guilty." Be resigned to your fate, and ponder over the story of the first and greatest exemplar of misguided ambition and sympathize with his Satanic majesty. The people do not believe you any way.

DEMOCRAT.

He predicts that further developments in the Yukon will go beyond the expectations of everybody. Concerning the situation at Dawson, Major Walsh said:
